Editor's Comment

Welcome to Issue No. 15

We had some really good news this month. Instead of just acting as local warehouses for US developed products (something they are often accused of), several major companies are trying to encourage local talent by putting up substantial prizes for a series of Australian software development competitions.

The opportunities here are not just for the winners - the chance to get a real crack at the professional developers world is not to be sneezed at - but for all the entrants. Nothing concentrates the mind so wonderfully as the chance to win a few grand and get a trip to the US. Any extra impetus to our already well-organised software expertise must be welcomed warmly. Well done Objectives, Acer and Microsoft. (See Page 50)

The other thing I must mention this month is our free ads section. We have noticed that some so-called 'private' advertisers are running multiple adverts in the free section, to the extent of becoming a small trading operation. Our free ads are for PRIVATE advertisers only and we shall not run blatantly opportunistic multiple ads. Our readers and our advertisers allow us to continue printing this magazine, so we aim to serve them first rather than back-door traders.

Happy Computing,

SHAYNE A. HUNTER
Editor/Publisher

Our Catalogue would be Totally Useless if we printed it.

What would YOU do with a 1000 page catalogue?

Incidentally, we're offering a prize for the best suggestion received by June 1, 1994.

BUT... On disk it allows you to quickly and easily find what you want.

Finding Shareware has never been so easy (or cheap!) Mega Share has Australia's largest catalogue (over 100,000 selections) and the lowest prices.

"I would like to compliment you on your new approach to the distribution of shareware... Yours is by far the most inexpensive and fairest method of distribution." (SS, NSW)

A huge catalogue is of little use unless you can find what you want. The Mega Share catalogue allows searching by methods such as:

Category
Selection Name
Description
Date

And even with all these features, the catalogue remains easy to use.

"I'd like to take this opportunity to congratulate you on your catalogue. I found it to be very user friendly and a pleasure to use." (SE, Tasmania)

The free demo catalogue is a smaller version of our full catalogue. It is supplied on a single 720K disk. The Demo catalogue also comes with your choice of either a game or an educational program.

Please ensure that your name and address are clearly written on the order form.

Please rush me the items I have selected on 3½" ☐ 5¼" ☐ (tick one) high density disks. I am supplying blank, formatted disks: Yes ☐ No ☐

How Does It Work?

To take advantage of this sensational offer, you must have a 1.2meg 51/4" floppy drive or a 1.44meg 31/2" floppy drive, and order a minimum of 10 disks.

If you have a 360K or 720K floppy disk drive, or you wish to order less than 10 disks, please feel free to do so at our standard rate of $5.00 per disk.

To place an order, simply fill in the coupon below and mail it to the address indicated.

Description Explanation

Unless otherwise indicated, all programs are one disk.

The requirements for a program are minimum requirements - if a program requires 2 floppy drives (or 2 drives), then a hard drive and floppy drive is also acceptable.

NEWS EDITOR'S SAY SO ...

It's been a busy month. The PC94 show, our birthday issue to get out, the prizes to sort through (that took a while). Not only that, I am off on holiday for a few days to Tasmania. But unlike previous trips away, where I spent a week or so getting out of touch with what was going on, I shall be firmly in touch this time. I will be taking with me the latest Compaq Aero and a Netcomm PCMCIA modem to go in it.

The whole thing will be loaded with cc:Mail mobile, and I will be able to keep in touch with all those people and companies that make things happen. So what you say, nothing new there. No, not really. Its just that the whole shebang, including 14,400bps fax modem weighs less than 2kg and is a really useful, workable and practical potable computer. That is new.

On the same topic, it seems there is some good news from within the halls of politic. The bean counters and greybeards that mutter in the bowels of Parliament House have decided that telecommuting really is a reality. They have decided to recognise it as a legitimate form of working and grant set rates of pay to workers doing it electronically. About time too. See you when I get back.

MICROCOM IN

US communications manufacturer Microcom has just opened a new Australian office. It will use this to promote its new range of modems, remote control software and networking products. Top of its must see list are the new $990 Porte modems which use new parallel port access techniques to give transmission speeds up to 28,800bps data and 14,400 bps fax. Even under Windows! Call Microcom on 02 410 9953.

SPEEDY CDS

Thanks to what it calls "revolutionary caching technology". CD Speedway from IMSI claims to give users up to 4,000 times faster access than using straight CD ROM access. The software reads entire files into cache, either memory or other device, and thus avoids using repeated read/write operations. The $149.95 software claims to blast through clip art and give smooth video clip playing. If you need speed ask IMSI for more fast details on 02 319 7533.

NEW LIMITS

A consortium of industry biggies including Seagate, Microsoft, Novell, IBM and others has decided that 528Mb is not enough. They have decided the current limit on IDE drive capacity (528Mb) should be increased in the light of the ever increasing sizes of commonly used operating systems and file sizes now available. BIOS manufacturers are also working on the problem which should soon mean SCSI is not the only only answer.

COMPAQ PICKS

First of the major manufacturers to choose other than Intel as CPU vendors for its machines,

COMPAQ

Compaq has opted to sign a deal with AMD. Compaq has said it will continue to use Intel chips, but the addition of AMD to its line up will no doubt allow some cuts in price compared to an equivalent Intel product. Who said the PC industry was dominated by one CPU? - a few months ago it was Intel or nothing. Now it is Power PC, RISC, Intel AMD, Cyrix and heaps more. Confusing! Ask Compaq to explain on 02 911 1999.

MANAGED MILLIONS

The new ANZAC class of frigates have lots of parts, and lots of drawings to go with each part. This means keeping track of over 1million drawings and 4.5Gb of data for each vessel. A system devised by Intergraph to run under Windows NT will keep track of all the essential information across Auckland, Canberra and Williamstown as well as on each of the ten ships. If you have a big data storage system, Intergraph can probably help - call them on 02 888 9900.

NEW PRINT SHOP

Long-time users of Broderbund's Print Shop can now go bananas with the whole system. Buy the new Print Shop CD Ensemble and you get Print Shop, graphics galore, comic characters, samplers, business images, 73 TrueType fonts and the Print Shop Companion. Selling for $189.95, it sounds like a good deal for the image fiddlers amongst our readers. Call distributors Dataflow on 02 310 2020 to get more details.

TRACKER TOPS

Locally developed contact manager Tracker has scooped the US opposition in PC Magazine (UK)'s usability rating. The magazine rated Tracker as first choice, and gave it 30% more points than the nearest rival. The selection was from eight other programs in the same field, with Tracker getting a healthy two times satisfaction rating in comparison with some other products. Satisfy your curiosity by calling Tracker developers Softcode on 03 853 3288.

Gateway is the Pentium/90 2000 PC. This screamer comes standard with a 90MHz Pentium, 16Mb RAM, a 540MB hard drive, a 2Mb video card, a double speed CD ROM and sells for an amazing $6,500.

Cautious drivers can opt for the Pentium/66 for a mere $5,400. If you have the nerve, call distributors Softrade on 008 809 205.

PUBLISHER DROPS

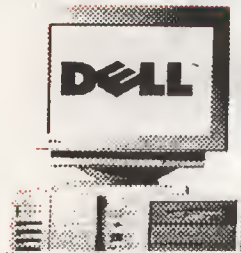

Microsoft has reduced the price of MS Publisher 2 from $299 to $199. Microsoft claims this is thanks to the high volume of sales. Before you rush out and buy it, see our review in last month's issue. Or call Microsoft on 02 870 2200 and ask them how fast it is.

FASTER, FASTER

One of the first off the blocks with a new Intel DX4 (100MHz) chip is Dell, with the announcement of new shipments of PCs with the latest fast chips. Aimed at giving existing 486 users a step up without the extra cost and configuration changes that might be required for the Pentium, the new machines are expected to be the new value range for first-time buyers within the next six months. Call Dell on 008 810 676 to find out how much they will cost.

SLIGHT ANNOYANCE

One result of the exclusion of under 18 year-olds from the recent PC94 show was a blast for the organisers from Anabelle Bits' MD Ken Lowe. He said he believed children (sic) under eighteen should be offered the opportunity to view computers and new technology. How old was Steve Jobs when he invented the first desktop? Or Bill Gates when he started programming? Nonetheless, if you are a child under eighteen and agree, why not call exhibition organisers AES on 03 867 4500 and complain.

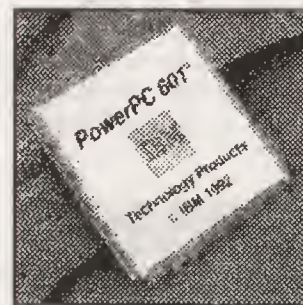

BIZARRO

We had to include this one, although it has nothing to do with computing. Fancy something gently vibrating in your pocket? A gadget from Sprint Electronics (about the size of a cigarette lighter) will tell you if your mobile phone is ringing by rubbing your leg. Get rid of that annoying buzz and tune into senso-phone technology by calling distributors Sprint on 03 428 9630.

MAC TO POWER

Existing Mac users wanting the power of the new PowerPC chip but without the dosh to make the full transition will be able to upgrade their existing machines, according to Apple marketing director David Rigg. He says the new chip and logic board will be available as an upgrade to users of most Quadra, Centris and some Mac and Performa products. The user-installable modules are billed as giving the potential to double or quadruple box speeds. Call Apple on 02 452 800 to find out more.

NEW WINVID

Microsoft has taken to heart some of the negative comments attracted by Video for Windows ver. 1, and has released version 1.1. Microsoft says the new release has better AVI capability, upgraded file translation and audio compression included. It also boasts improvements in image quality and hardware and software support. It includes new compression algorithms, better cross-platform support and upgraded development tools. That should make multimedia developers happy. Microsoft is on 02 870 2200.

OOPS!!

In the March edition our silly editor put in the wrong price for the Tseng Labs card in our Video Scorchers review. The Tseng Labs MegaEva ET4000/W32i should have been listed at $390, not $295 as printed. Apologies for any inconvenience caused to readers.

ALDUS & ADOBE MERGE

Two of the big names and indisputable innovators in the imaging industry, Adobe and Aldus are to merge. The new company had not been named at press time, but both companies are expected to bring their specialist expertise to the joint operation. This will mean the Postscript, printing and foundry knowledge of Adobe and the DTP and imaging experience of Aldus in one box. Look out for some interesting developments. Call Aldus on 02 418 8488 to get the latest.

ENCRYPTOMANIA

Computer users worried about the safety of data on their systems now have an alternative to taking the hard disk home. Kamelian is a hardware device that enables "dynamic volatile encryption transparent in hardware." Sounds impressive; what it means is all your data is useless unless it is accessed through the Kamelian card with the correct password.

The cards come in IDE controller, network, SCSI and I/O card format and are built to support all operating systems. Call distributors Genitech on 02 476 4277 if you want to stay safe.

RENO PLAYER

MEDIA VISION

Media Vision claims it has provided the answer to all notebook CD ROM hassles with the Reno portable CD ROM drive. The new unit looks exactly like a personal CD player, but connects into a SCSI-2 interface and adds double spin, Photo CD and battery operation to the usual CD capability. It is supplied with an external battery/docking connector. Pricing is set at $599, and MediaVision will tell you more on 02 979 5791.

SUPERCALC

Patient users of Computer Associates SuperCalc will be pleased to hear a Windows version is now available. The new product is billed as being a brand new product, unique in its combination of spreadsheet and multi-dimensional functionality. The new version includes data rotation, data analysis and variable perspectives, says CA. The company claims it does what Lotus 123 and Improv do all in the one package, and includes extensive file translation capabilities as well. Call CA on 02 923 2066 if you want further details.

BUSINESS PLAN

If your bank manager wants to lend you money but only if you provide a business plan, fear not. Making sense of all those figures and projections has just become easier, according to software distributors DataTech. A new package, excitingly titled Business Plan Toolkit, is aimed firmly at the business market. It helps develop a business description, then gives simple menu-driven access to financial planning projections and capabilities. Suited to both new and established businesses, the software is available for $199 and works on both DOS and Mac platforms. Data Tech will clue you in on 02 955 3611.

MAC DISPLAY

Latest in the line up from Apple is a 24-bit display card for NuBus slot machines. The 24AC gives display resolutions up to 1152x870 with 16.7million colours, and is claimed to give speed increases of up to 10 times when compared to standard display cards. Selling for $2495, the 24AC is also designed to be PowerPC compatible. Details from Apple on 02 452 8000.

NEW ADLIB

Sound card pioneer AdLib has just put the finishing touches to what it calls a giant leap forward in PC sound technology. Branded the AdLib Gold 1000, the new card has on board 16-bit FM synthesis, 22 stereo voices and 12-bit digital recording capability. It uses the new Yamaha Magic chipset to help deliver 96db dynamic range sound, along with built in compression and decompression smarts. It outputs 1.2watts, and combines two DMA channels for audio and CD ROM. Call distributors Stocom on 02 948 7294 for more info.

KIDS STUFF

Australian publisher Firmware has given details of its latest venture, a completely home grown CD ROM for children called Playtime in the Park. The

THUNDEROUS

If you want a modem with a raunchy name, what better than the new Spirit Thunder from Mike Boorne Electronics. Conforming to the V.32terbo specification, the new modem can cram up to a theoretical maximum of 76.8kbits/s down an ordinary phone line using MNP5 compression. Existing Spirit II owners can upgrade to the new Thunder model by exchanging the Analog Devices processor chipset. Thunder sells for $749 and comes with data and fax software included. THIS MONTH'S WINNERS (and are there lots of them)

Did you win some of those $1700 worth of prizes? Read on to see . . .

As usual, thanks to all those who entered - for there to be winners there have to be losers. Lucky first out of the editor's hat was Alan Moon of Weston, NSW. He gets a brand new Lotus SmartSuite to play with. Second, and soon to be playing with that SoundBlasterDeluxe kit is J.Newson of Frankston, VIC. Third, with a VistaPro CD is R.Norton of S.Hedland, WA. Fourth with a Mars Explorer CD is Paul Wheeler of Dudley, VIC. Fifth and now completely Microsoft moused is Ron Gardnir of Swansea, NSW. Sixth through to fifteenth were D.Sheridan of Launceston, Ron Riegel-Huth of West Lakes, M.Platup of Yoldie Bay, David Buchanan of Wynnum, R.McEwan of Cranbrook, R.Schramm of New Norfolk, Wayne Moore of Somerset, P.Johnson of Richmond, (there seem to be a lot from Tassie - Ed), W.Oliver of Raymond Terrace, and G.Porter of Goolwa. Wow. All you guys get a playable demo version of MechWarriors worth $5 trade in for the real thing. For those who thought GDI stood for Gracefully Decorated Item, Great Day Indeed or Great birthDay Issue: you were wrong, sadly. It is short for Graphical Device Interface. Better luck next time all those who missed out, and keep those entries coming in for this month's Microsoft special.

Orchid SoundWave/CD Multimedia Kit

How do you test a multimedia soundcard and CD ROM drive kit? Do you listen to it, look at it, or just weigh it? There are no real benchmarks other than CD ROM drive speed to compare like with like. All you can do is trust your ears. On that level, the Orchid Soundwave/32 is a very good product.

Compared to my standard Acer setup, or the backup MediaVision Fusion we use, the Orchid was clearer, sharper and had less background noise. However, the sound of the product is not the only yardstick, even if we can't measure precisely what it is doing. Things like ease of use, cost, usability and practicality come into the equation too.

Although it really does deliver top quality sound - even through the crummy little speakers we habitually use - it is not a cheap upgrade kit at $925. The kit includes the sound card, a lapel-sized microphone you can stick on to your monitor, the customised CD ROM drive and a couple of utility and drivers disks. You also get OEM versions of Day of the Tentacle, Macromedia Action, America's best selling Video Movie Guide 1993 (handy), and Gus goes to Cybertown. Medium value stuff.

EASY INSTALL

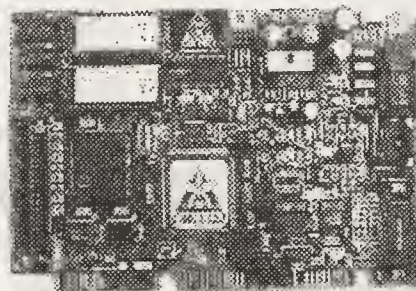

Installing was easy enough, with all the screws, all cables and even an earphone to RCA phono jack connector cable.

Although the disks were not labelled exactly as listed us!!! A short file copy later all was well, but this could really spoil things for novice users.

The drive itself has been modified from the original Phillips unit to enable complete control from the front panel via two buttons, as well as auto load and unload via software. Flashy indeed. The bonus here is you can then use your PC as a CD player without having to burn precious power by in the manual, and the interface was a boring DOS text screen, the software all loaded without hiccups.

Both card and CD ROM were recognised by the auto-test routine with the software detecting Windows and adding the relevant drivers accordingly. The sound card beeped and all was well. Apart from the non-appearance of the CD drive. Yep, Orchid had done the usual and not updated the MSCDEX files. Why do manufacturers do this to having the monitor switched on to see what the software is doing). The drive did seem to have a problem with some tracks on audio CDs, and consequently gave us some impromptu rap demonstrations. Most of the time it was OK, but the distributors told us they are aware of the problem.

GOOD SOUND

Sound-wise, the card performed extremely effectively through its bundled software. Some users have reported problems with the wavetable samples, but we found them no better or worse than the competition. Perhaps our ears are going.

SOUND CENTRE

The integrated sound centre control software works very well, giving simultaneous input and playback of up to four sources. The MIDI volume controls seemed a bit On/Off rather than graduated, but otherwise were fine. A sophisticated waveform editor allows some extremely fine tuning of .WAV files, and although the package did not include the Talking Calendar as mentioned in the manual, the included software must be judged better quality than average.

So apart from the installation, this unit must be judged a quality performer. As such, and bearing in mind the price, it would seem likely to attract the professional end of the sound card spectrum. But if they asked me, I would recommend chucking all those old CD titles and either cutting the cost or writing a better install routine.

Jeremy Torr ☐

Ever since I saw the Hewlett Packard Omnibook 300 (CM, Feb 94), I have been fascinated by just how much you can get into a tiny package.

Olivetti has long been up there with the leaders in miniaturisation, and a year or so ago released the Quaderno. This tiny (210x150mm) marvel was smaller than the HP, include sound capability and ran on a 286 so ruling out any reasonable possibility of using Windows. It also used a proprietary sound file format so once sound was in the Quaderno, it stayed there.

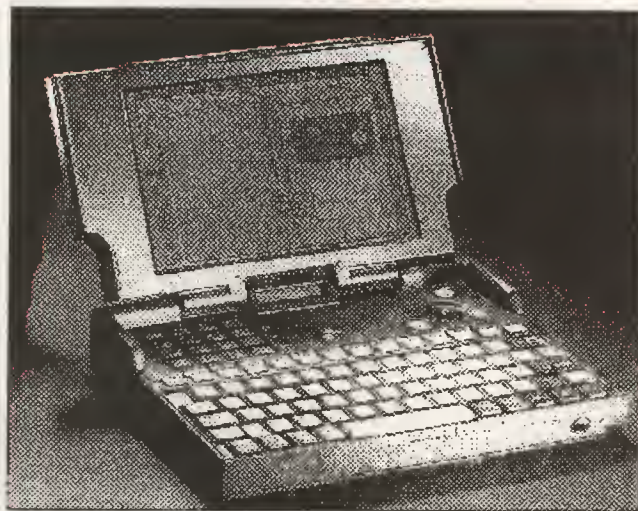

THE ISSUES

Now Olivetti has addressed the issues, and produced the Quaderno 33. This uses the same case as the original, with the addition of a much improved trackball arrangement and a better CPU. Now fitted with an AMD 386SXLV, the unit comes ready loaded with DOS 5, Windows 3.1, Microsoft Works and Lotus Organiser. The hard drive is a reasonable 60Mb, the RAM is 4Mb standard, and the back panel has a surprisingly comprehensive array of output and input ports. These are all sub-miniature (so you'll have to buy the correct cables from Olivetti) and include VGA, parallel/external floppy, serial and a special dedicated modem out. There is also a PCMCIA Type II slot so linking to the outside world should be a cinch.

and headphone jacks. The battery is a removable unit which should last at least 5 realistic working hours, and the charger recharges it in around two hours giving a good working ratio. The only connector supplied is the serial cable. Using the supplied FileLink software,

Olivetti's QUADERNO

The other extra special feature of the Quaderno33 is its clever audio capability. You can use it as a simple dictation machine - press the cassette-style buttons on the case and it will record directly to hard disk, squashing up to a minute of audio in 4Mb of disk space. It will also play any WAVs you want it to so Jezzball sounds really good on the train! The compression is configurable according to quality requirements, and can be configured to enable OLE voice annotation of documents. This is extremely good in such a small and portable unit.

GOOD SCREEN

The screen is surprisingly good for its size (145x110 mm) with 16 grey scales and auto power down as indeed the hard disk and CPU have too. The case itself is more robust than many others of its kind, and should easily withstand life on the road. I didn't drop it to see. Like most of its kind it has Auto-resume built in so you don't have to wait for Windows to load before you can see where you were before you last switched off.

So far, so good. It is small, brilliantly engineered, totally interoperable with desktop PCs and has good software and hardware. reasonable battery life and tons of expansion. Why aren't Quadernos all over the place then? As usual, there are some negatives.

First, it is pricey at $3495. To pay that for a 386 is asking rather a lot, even if it does have all the bells and whistles. Second, the keyboard is just that bit too small to type easily on. Touch typing is just not on. Also, surprisingly for an Italian product, it doesn't fit the hand comfortably with all those square edges.

The other negative is the manual. Some things are really difficult to find, and others just left out. I never did find out what the AUX button was for on the case, and as to the optional internal modem - how you fit that is anybody's guess. All the software manuals are included on the hard disk, but Works and Organiser are pretty easy to use anyhow.

A FOLDING BIKE

The bottom line: The Quaderno 33 is a superb example of the folding bicycle concept. Everybody thinks it is essential, it has all the right design features, yet it still doesn't sell as well as the big brother version. It might do if it were cheaper though.

Although they are a fairly recent player on the scene, IPC is pitching to be a major player in the PC market for a while.

One of Singapore's fastest growing companies, lots of pats on the back from the US for its Austin range of computers and now a growing list of directly managed outlets in Australia should help them keep the ball rolling.

If they can sell solid products at a bargain price, they should soon establish themselves firmly in the local market. So does a Pentium 66, 16Mb RAM and a 540Mb hard drive sound OK for just under $7000? That's what is on offer. However, to give some kind of a benchmark to work from you can buy a 486/33 with everything on board for around $2000. The question is, does that extra $5000 give you value for money?

POWER TO SPARE

In terms of processing power, definitely. We ran our MIPS test suite on the workshop 486/40. It gave us MIPS rating of just under 7, which is not bad for a simple desktop with a mere 256k cache and 8Mb RAM. Then we ran the MIPS test on the Dynasty which blew away the cobwebs at a stunning 2115 MIPS.

WinArch
Reports	Start Benchmark	Resolution Tests Help
	Word Processing	8.40 / B4
	CAD / Draw	8.15 / B4
	Spreadsheet	4.59 / B4
	Paint	8.68 / B4

The big difference in the two was in the area of register processing, where the Pentium's 64-bit internal architecture boosted the score from the 486's 15 to 7,000. A big difference indeed.

PROS: Good price for the performance. 512k cache.

RATING:

In appearance, the Dynasty is a very vanilla looking box, with grey, grey, grey and blue finish. The buttons are big and there really is not much else to look at. Inside the steel case is a half-size motherboard, with 512k cache memory, 16Mb RAM and a Pentium chip hiding underneath a tiny cooling system which consists of a heatsink and fan.

Our test model had a no-name ISA IDE controller and a Diamond Stealth24 video card. The only drive fitted apart from the Conner hard disk was an own brand 3.5" floppy. Three VLB VESA local bus slots are provided, and five standard 16-bit ISA slots in addition. Keyboard, DOS, Windows, a mouse and a basic manual are also included in the package. A 14" non-interlaced monitor - with a smart "Professional Monitor" badge on it - completed the setup.

The keyboard is an adequate unit, as is the mouse its just a good job they don't have "Professional" stickers. The monitor is likewise OK if not brilliant, with simple rotary controls. In fact it seems the makers have kept the price down by the use of bog-standard equipment rather than super-pro quality.

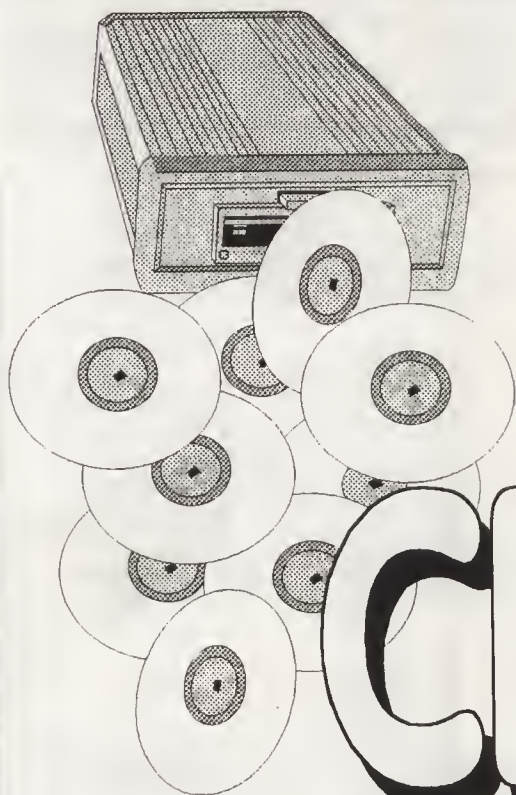

In terms of graphics performance, you would expect a superb Wintach rating from this machine. It has the CPU and the graphics card to do it all. However, the Windows drivers loaded were just that - Standard VGA 600x800. Consequently the Wintach rating was a piss-poor 7.53 whereas it should have been well up towards the half-century with the proper Stealth drivers. In IPC's defence, the driver disks were supplied in the box so a competent user would easily be able to rectify that problem.

Apart from that, the only other snag we came across was the Dynasty's habit of locking up when trying to clip images from inside a DOS window. That shouldn't happen. Overall, the Dynasty is a very powerful PC in a very plain box. But if you need sheer power and can afford it, you should check out the IPC Dynasty.

Companies often produce CD ROM kits and instructions expecting the user to be able to install and configure them without hitch. Unfortunately this can often not be the case . . .

Paul Ridsdale reports.

CD-ROM drives

In this article I will endeavour to help the people who may not be able to understand the complex procedures of installing a CD ROM drive. It is not simple, but it is not impossible. So roll up the sleeves and give it a try.

There are many types of CD ROM drives, cards and kits available on the market, but most are very similar. The very first thing you should do is unpack the entire kit and ensure everything required is in the box. Some of the components that can sometimes be left out on the production line are the data cables, audio cables and screws. If all is not there, it's back to the shop.

It is imperative that you install your CD ROM kit on a clean, clear table. Remove the casing from the computer ensuring you keep all of the screws separate to avoid mixups later. Next remove one steel plate covering the back of a spare interface (bus) slot at the rear of the computer. Remove the controller or sound card from packaging and push it gently into the empty 16-bit slot. Make sure the card is firmly in place and the sockets line up on the back of the unit, then replace the screw and tighten firmly. From here you should connect all the cables to the sound/controller card, ensuring they are around the right way. The red stripe on the multi-way data cable goes next to pins one and two on both the drive and sound card or controller card. The audio cable usually only fits one way up.

Next remove the front cover plate from the computer casing and slide the drive into the drive bay, then secure it with the supplied screws. Make sure you only use the screws supplied as they will be the correct thread and length for the CD ROM drive; longer ones may foul the works or PCB inside the case. Attach the other end of the data and audio cables to the drive, again making sure all is connected the right way (red stripe, pins 1&2) and double check all of your screws and connections to make absolutely sure everything is on. Plug the power supply lead in to the drive unit - there is always at least one spare power lead in every computer, again making sure it is the right way round. It will only fit easily one way up. Then reattach the computer case: the hardware fitting is now complete!

Software installation is more particular to each type of drive. Some may have a series of disks to install while others may only require one. If you are installing a Media Magic Kit then you should only have one disk, and installation will be an easy one step process. Fortunately with the Media Magic Products all the software can be installed in the Windows environment enabling an easy installation. Enter into the File Manager Icon and select "setup.exe" file to run, from there you follow the on screen instructions.

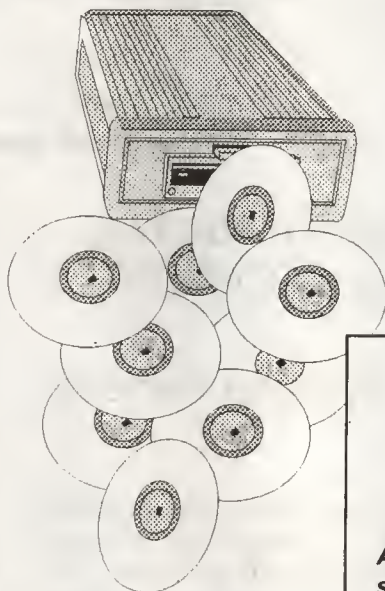

If you are running a Creative Labs Kit then you will have approximately five different disks. There are three disks for the sound card that will allow you to test the operation of the card before installing the CD ROM software. The other disks will configure the correct MCSDEX CD ROM driver switches to your start up files, and add paths and driver specs to the autoexec and config files.

Other units may simply add an extra directory and a couple of lines to your config.sys and autoexec.bat files. Other yet may include a series of simple CD ROM utilities such as Audio CD players, MIDI mixers or player programs. Reboot your computer to make sure the new start-up files take effect - you should see a few extra screen lines giving details of what drivers, ROM drive types and possible drive cache memory are available. Next try to change drive to the next logical drive - if your last drive letter was C: previously, try to go to D:. If all is well, an extra drive letter should now be available. Or you can load Windows and use the file manager to make sure you are now on-line with a nice new CD ROM icon allocated as the next logical drive letter. If this is correct, congratulations you have successfully at you fingertips. If you get into any trouble fitting your CD ROM do not worry as there are many people in the industry like myself who are more than willing to lend a hand or offer some advice. Thank you and Happy Computing.

SCSI DRIVES - The second option in CD ROM drives.

Another type of CD ROM that requires some slightly different installation procedures, is a SCSI interface drive. If you have a SCSI interface and would like to attach a CD ROM, you will need a CD ROM drive that has a SCSI interface. SCSI controllers are capable of running anything up to seven devices, so in effect you could run more than one CD ROM drive if you wanted to. The installation process is very similar to the kit installation process but it gets slightly more complicated when you connect more than one device.

You will have to set hardware settings (usually DIP switches) on each drive to put them in the correct order for the corresponding drive letters, then you have to change the start-up files to suit the number of CD ROM devices you are connecting. If you have no sound card but have a SCSI interface then you will not be able to hear computer generated sound through the CD ROM drive. The only sound you get would be CD sound such as music CDs. Or the PC speaker making the usual weak farty noises.

installed your CD ROM kit.

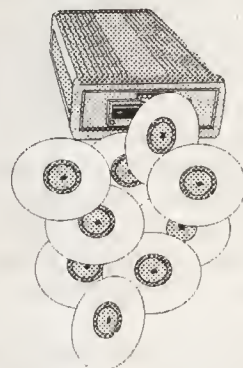

If not consult your dealer (or me if you are desperate) for further instructions. Likely problems are an "Incorrect DOS version" message, "Invalid drive specification", or "No drive attached or Device Driver not installed", "Drive not connected message". See the troubleshooting box for quick solutions.

But whatever problems you encounter - and often none crop up at all - just remember it will be worth it.

CD-ROM drives

What you should know before you buy - the raw facts on choosing a CD ROM drive.

By John Hassall

CD ROMS

Internal or external.

Where possible, it is better to use an internal drive. It saves clutter, it is cheaper and it usually interfaces with the controller card or sound card much more easily. However, internal drives are not always practical. The internal drives need one spare 5.25" drive bay with front access, and they also draw power from the computer's own internal power supply. If there is no spare drive bay or an inadequate power supply then an external drive is really the ideal solution.

AT or SCSI drives.

The internal AT bus (sometimes called proprietary) drives are ideal for stand alone PCs. They are generally easier to install, and use either one simple controller card or interface to an existing or matched sound card. Most people assume SCSI drives are by definition faster than AT bus. This is not necessarily true. The industry standard SCSI (small computer systems interface) is ideally suited to the high end user, particularly if they are using other devices such as tape backup drives, scanners, large hard disks and so on. SCSI allows seven devices or drives to be run from only one controller, so can save on controller card requirements.

Multispin.

The original CD ROM drives all had a data transfer rate of 150kb per second (kb/s). This is more than adequate for most text-based CD ROM titles. However, as software publishers began to develop true multimedia titles - including video clips - the data transfer rate became more of an issue. Single speed CD ROM drives are still available, but now most drives are double spin and the prices are not that much more. Think of the future and insist on a double spin (or even more) drive when you buy.

Kodak offers a service where photographs can be put on to a CD disc. Up to a 100 images can be stored, and these may be added over time. A multisession drive allows you to access all of those images. Once again, this does not cost any more and even if you

Trouble - shooting

If your installation goes smoothly, the lights wink and all looks sweet until you boot up when nothing happens, here are a few tips to help calm that feeling of panic. These are likely error messages at the DOS prompt with some easy fixes, plus some general tips.

Incorrect DOS version. This simply means the DOS extension you are using (MSCDEX.EXE) is the wrong one for your version of DOS. Look in the DOS directory for an MSCDEX file, and then copy it to the path specified in the autoexec.bat file. Easy.

Invalid drive specification. This often happens if your drive install program gives the drive a letter that is already in use. Specify "Lastdrive=Z" in your config.sys file to make the drive reappear.

No drive attached or Device Driver not installed. This could be the wrong device driver or parameters, or simply a faulty connection on the data cable. Make sure the driver is loading by pressing "Break/Pause" key whilst the machine is booting.

Drive not connected message. This means you probably have not

JUST NEWS & REVIEWS

don't have an immediate requirement for Photo CD, you may find it useful in the future

Controller cards.

You can either go for a stand-alone controller (either SCSI or proprietary - see previous) or a combination sound/controller card. The latter are becoming more popular for home use, with SCSI still the business favourite. The straight SCSI card is cheaper, but means you have to buy an extra card

(and use up another bus slot) to hear that soundtrack. The sound card option means you get sound and controller in only one bus slot, but make sure the card has the right connectors for the CD ROM drive you are using. These include Panasonic, Mitsumi, Sony, Philips and SCSI. There is really no advantage using a simple proprietary AT bus controller as you have all the disadvantages (apart from a very small cost saving.)

Multimedia upgrade kits.

This has been the most popular way to purchase a CD ROM drive and sound card. Kits consist of a sound card controller, a CD ROM drive, and usually some CD titles, speakers and a microphone. It is important to make sure that you pay for and get exactly frustration. Plus you get some CD software to get you going - but make sure it is not old stock being given away. If the software titles are just what you want, great. If not, just buy the basics and pick up the software later. Obviously if you have either sound card or CD ROM drive, this option is not for you. ☐

... connected the drive properly. Check the data cable is the right way up - some can be put in the wrong way.

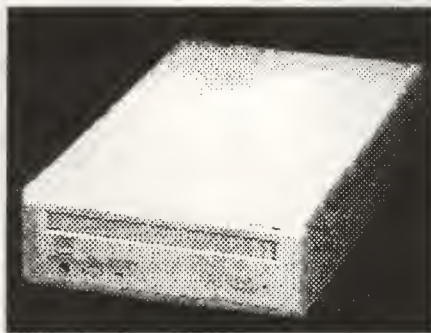

No sound or one channel sound only. The audio sockets on some drives are four or five-pin. As most audio leads are three or four wire, it is easy to swap them to make the music work.

Drive only works when warmed up. Condensation is a major cause of skipping, bad tracking and refusal to work. Don't run your PC in humid areas.

Digitised speech is jerky and rap-like. Your CD is working faster than your PC can cope. Upgrade your system!

Not enough memory message. An all too common complaint. Most CD ROM games need heaps of memory to run properly. If you have DOS 6, run Memmaker, or go out and buy QEMM which will give you more low memory than you thought you could ever get. Be aware that some CD ROM drivers don't like being loaded high, though.

If all else fails. Drop a line to Dr.PC. He knows everything. ☐ what you need. The big advantage of this method is that the makers usually provide one integrated installation program to help configure the new card and drive. This can save much trial and error and hair-pulling

John Hassall has been involved in specifying and distributing multimedia products for many years at Multimedia Technology and can be contacted on 03 853 6700.

As an incentive to prospective purchasers, software publishers often supply OEM or bundled software titles to drive and kit makers. These are the same as the full price versions but in different packaging, and under the licensing agreements are only to be sold with the CD ROM drives or kits. There are many vendors who breach this agreement and quite often sell the OEM software titles separately. This is a breach of contract and should not be supported by responsible software buyers and users.

Dear Dr.PC,
I have an Amsstrad PC2086/30 which is an XT 8086 which has a noisy hard drive. The manual says only replace the drive with another RLL type, but luckily for an Amstrad the controller card is separate from the motherboard. If I also replaced the hard drive controller card could I use another type of hard drive as long as it suited. If so what type of hard drives would suit an XT8086 computers, and which is best?

Jeff Bain, W.Devonport, TAS.

□ Well Jeff, its good to hear you are soldiering on with your Amstrad. If you can swap the controller card, you should be able to install any IDE drive. A suitable IDE controller might be a bit hard to find however as I suspect you will have to fit it into an 8-bit slot. It might be as easy, given the age of the rest of the components, to track down another similar model (a wanted ad in the local paper) and keep it for spares. It will probably cost less in the long run.

Dear Dr.PC,
I recently purchased a Viewtop AVGA3 accclerator card which came with no instructions as to what the big line of jumpers does. The card straight out of the box didn't work, but after experimenting with a few settings I found one that is pretty good. I do still get the occasional SoundBlaster problem though. Could you possibly provide the specs of this card, or let me know where I can find them? Any assistance gratefully appreciated.

J.Anthony, Waverly, VIC.

□ Jamie, all I can say is you are lucky anything works at all having moved the jumpers around with no instructions. Do you have the original settings? The factory defaults are usually best on graphics cards if there is a clash you could probably solve it more easily by changing the sound card IRQ (that's where the problem usually lies). It may be that there is also a memory address clash as some cards use COM4 addresses but without the instructions you are well stuffed. If readers have the inside info on the Viewtop card, please fax the answers (or where you can get them) to Jamie on 02 389 6181.

Dear Dr.PC,
Sorry but you can't help my 386 PC. It died. At the end of January we had a severe thunderstorm and so took the precaution of turning off all our electrical appliances. Guess what? That's right, lightning hit the house, went through the power points, earth leakage trip, spike arrestor and killed my PC, fax modem, SEGA master, phone radio alarm and two colour TVs. So PLEASE UNPLUG your equipment when storms are around. Luckily for us we were covered by insurance. The mag is great and I'll keep buying and recommending it.

Paul Olsen, Gladstone,
QLD.

□ I love a hard luck story. And all those compliments. I guess you would like a prize - for when you have a PC again. But seriously, Paul is right. Unplugging is the only sure way to protect your gear from severe electrical discharge.

Dear Dr.PC,
Do you have any advice or details about a product called ReelMagic. Does it really do what the makers claim and play things like Zork and 7th Guest full screen in 32,000 colours? Isn't the scale the clip will play set by the CD ROM? Such that you would have to buy a new CD disc for the card to do what is claimed. So you have to buy specific ReelMagic products to use the card - am I right or wrong? Incidentally, last month you had Ian Gold from Quarterdeck talking about memory managers. Would it be possible for you to do something like this each month, with leading people in the software and hardware industry talking about products and new direction? (There was also some carping about software registration but we edited that out -Ed).

and expansion chipset to expand a very much compressed version of Zork, or whatever game or movie, onto the screen in full motion video format. So yes, you have to buy ReelMagic format CD ROMs, although you can use your existing CD ROM drive with the ReelMagic card. Incidentally, the output is really good, so if the format catches on you could soon be watching Lightning Jack on your PC.

Dear Dr.PC,
I've got a problem with my 486SX/25. I'm still only a young computer hacker and can't get into my machine. In the CMOS setup it has DRIVE C: Not Installed, and the same for drive A: and B:. Now what do I do as I can't get in at all? Another thing I'd like to know is how to get more memory and better performance out of my computer. I have 640k base and 3072k extended memory but the largest program executable is 553. How can I fix that?

Andrew Dobbins,
Prosperine, QLD.

☐ Don't panic
Andrew. All you need to do once you are in CMOS setup (you obviously know how to get there) is to highlight the drive you want to access (A: to start with) then use PgDn or whatever the instructions say to change the type defined. This will probably be 3.5" 1.44Mb. Do the same for the other floppy, and the hard drive. The latter may have some sort of Hard Drive Auto Detect setting, if not you will need to change to Type 47, and then enter the heads, cylinders and sectors which are usually written on the case of the drive itself. If not you may need to contact the makers for that information. On the memory front, if you are using DOS 6, run Memmaker at the C: prompt to get more usable DOS memory, or rush out and buy QEMM (see the CD ROMs article) to get even more space. Alternatively, you could try using the LOADHI command to make more space. Good luck. ☐

Once you get a hard disk it will no doubt be very useful, Paul. Keep those letters coming, if you do, you could be our next prize letter winner, as well as having your problem put before the nation. ☐ We had a query from one reader who wanted to know how to do a screen clip. If you are running Windows, simply press the PrintScreen button on the keyboard when the right screen is showing. Then open Clipboard and the screen can be saved to disk as a .CLP file. If you are working in DOS, you may need to use something like Pzazz, Snap-It or the shareware program Screen Thief from Manacomm on 07 368 236.

☐ Acer wrote to tell us it is starting up a brand new software authoring company. To help get things going, it is organising a nationwide software games authoring contest. The top prize is $5,000, with Acer multimedia PC being given as consolation prizes. The winner will also be offered a writing contract, and possible royalties on publication across Asia. MD of the new venture, Lori Dugdale, says the object was to encourage innovative local authors. Games must support SoundBlaster and run on 386 PC with 2Mb RAM. CD or disk entries are welcome. Details of the comp from Acer on 02 870 1999.

JUST NEWS & REVIEWS

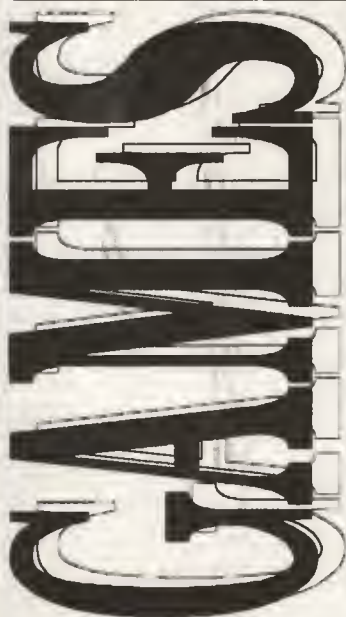

LETTERS & STUFF

☑ Dennis Hill wrote asking us to name problem disks, following our piece on p.29 of the March issue. Although we are trying to provide as much information as we can, Dennis, we don't want to spend too much time in court. We based our report on information gained first hand and through more than one dealer who were all quite happy to tell us which brand was "going down" at alarming rates. Since then we have heard that the same company's PCMCIA disks are having trouble too. Perhaps if you called one or two dealers you might get the same information as we did. Incidentally, Quantum and Fujitsu have very good reputations so you should be OK there.

☑ Yet more competitions. Lorraine Cobcroft dropped us a line giving details of another for software authors, but this time of the younger sort. Her company, Objectives, markets the Layout authoring toolset which is being promoted throughout schools across Australia. Accordingly, they will be inviting budding young programmers to submit entries for the comp which runs from April to September. Call 07 855 2333 for details or a demo disk.

☑ We had a couple of queries from readers who wanted to know how to do a screen clip. If you are running Windows, simply press the PrintScreen button on the keyboard when the right screen is showing. Then open Clipboard and the screen can be saved to disk as a .CLP file. If you are working in DOS, you may need to use something like Pzazz, Snap-It or the shareware program Screen Thief from Manacomm on 07 368 236. Instructions, hot-keys and saving parameters are all included with these programs.

☑ Yet more more competitions! Not to be outdone by Acer and Objectives, Microsoft is holding - you guessed it - a competition for developers who have been on the Tech-Ed course. Man in charge John Treloar wrote and told us he will be offering total prize money of over $15,000 and the promise of a spot at Comdex next year for the best solution to a particular business need and link into Microsoft Office. Call him on 02 870 2669 and see what he wants. ☐

Sorry about this month's lack of a MechWarrior review - the editor said we had to look at kid's stuff, and also the release date has been put back slightly. It will be soon though, we promise. In the meantime look out for a new shareware special developed in good old OZ, titled Mystic Towers. This one is guaranteed to knock your socks off and sound great too. See you next month - the Games Captain.

This month's Games Winner

Thanks to John Foti for his review of Inca II. John, your prize is on its way. And remember all you budding games writers: send us your games reviews (preferably on disk) ASAP to Games Captain, PO BOX 34, Geelong, VIC 3220. You could be in the draw for a prize. As long as you include Pictures, Screen Clips or Photos from the Manual. Get to it gamers.

blank screen. Smart. English, Japanese and Spanish narration is included, along with real designer quality pictures and enough "hot-spots" on each page to make the ankle-biters' mouse fingers ache.

Guided by the in-book animated scruffy narrator, you can either sit and listen to the story and watch it unfold, or stop on each page and play. That is FUN. Everything on each page does something - lots of silly pigs and trees

Just Grandma and Me

This CD ROM is one of the original Living Books from Broderbund, but it is still one of the most appealing. It is only 12 pages long, but has excellent sound, superb synchronisation, terrific visual effects, and noises to keep the shortest of juvenile attention spans happy. The good basic story and sensible interactive play allows almost all ages to get something out of the trip to the seaside. The designers have used slow fades to allow reloading of data without kids getting bored looking at a and radios and toilets and they all respond to a mouse click. Frogs jump out of letter boxes and seashells play tunes, cows moo and squirrels run up and down trees. Add to this the very simple controls: left, right, stop (page number), preview and quit and there is nothing left to ask for. The spoken, music and sampled sound are top quality too.

At the risk of offending the kids, Grandma and Me is bloody marvellous. Get it next birthday, Christmas, Easter or excuse. You'll love it.

Rating: Bloody marvellous. Can't be faulted:

ARTHUR'S

Obviously built by the same experts as Grandma, this CD has many similarities, including, farting schoolhouses, exploding science labs and a rather droopy looking hero in Arthur

It is less immediately chummy than Grandma, but better for children with slightly higher level reading skills. The problem is that Arthur has a new teacher, Mr. Ratburn who is totally - but TOTALLY - strict. The whole class is waiting with bated breath for the spellathon, and of course the Brain and the Goody-Goody are confident of wrapping up the shiny big trophy. But droopy little Arthur, despite the best attempts of his little sister, manages to learn all the words and win the prize.

Like Grandma, the scene is set with a constant low-level noise in the background - just like school. There is a common thread of the paper airplane to find on every page, animated statues who mess around with drinking fountains and pigs in the kitchen cupboard to contend with on the search for the spellathon prize.

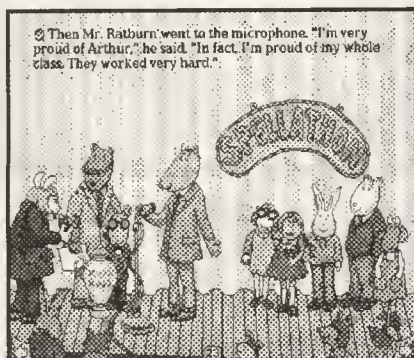

There is more interspersed narration, and more of a real animated cartoon feel than Grandma, and the authors have also squeezed in 25 pages of action - good going in a mere 650Mb.

JUST GAMES

TEACHER TROUBLE

The text is highlighted as the words are narrated or the characters speak, so learning the words should come easily to first timers. The only gripe is the size of the text - bigger would be better. One last real plus point for this book is the fact it runs direct from CD ROM - no clogged hard disks thanks to special viewer files from Broderbund. An excellent value package.

It gets a:

After the success of Inca a sequel had to be made. This is it, and comes on a CD, and ran on a 486SX/33 with 8Mb of RAM and a 1Mb VESA graphics card. The game ran very smoothly without almost any problems and is ALMOST brilliant as follows.

A mysterious asteroid is threatening to destroy the balance of power in the Empire, you play Eldorado, the great Inca, as you attempt to control the asteroid. Just to make things confusing you start off as Atahualpa, Eldorado's jerk son. He steals a space ship and ends up as target practice for Edorado's old foe, Aguirre. You then seek revenge by taking on the might of Aguirre's space armada and by controlling the asteroid which is in his power.

The still graphics and animation are excellent, slightly better than the original game, however the biggest improvement is in gameplay. Inca suffered from lack of player control, this is not the case with Inca II where both play and targeting is quite good. Inca also had arguably the best music ever put on a game disc - Inca II is great but not as brilliant.

Digitised actors with bad lip sync are used throughout the game. It is interesting to change from English to French while playing. The English dialogue is much more aggressive than the French. A remarkable feature is the video and recorder replay. This enables you to replay any area of the game which you have already completed.

What sets this game apart is that you are continuously playing different roles throughout. It varies from puzzle solving to train rides to space combat. I must admit I needed a little help with one of the earlier puzzles but the rest are fairly straightforward. With a little persistence they can all be solved, but there is one area that really bugged me. This is the Maze.

There is no way to map the Maze which is an area of look-alike tunnels, but the distributors, AMI, assured me that a solution was available with the purchase of the "Solution Book". Great, directions finally at hand. Wrong, here are some quotes: "find the room with pictures . . . find the room with the mirrors . . . find the room with the pictures." Geez, I felt like putting my head through the screen!

Fortunately if you make it to the maze you have already completed 95% of the game. Unfortunately the game is saved at set intervals so if you have already wasted 10 hours searching through the maze and only found half the rooms you cannot save it to resume later on.

JUST GAMES

As is becoming quite common in games lately, the ending is a real letdown, quite pathetic in fact. I expected fireworks, explosions, or mind blowing sound to come leaping from the computer. Alas, nothing much happened. One more point. There is a little bit of Australiana in the game surprising since the game was produced by a French company. You'll have to buy the game to find out what it is, but it's a nice surprise.

It would have been a 10 outta 10 game but the ridiculous maze and pitiable ending put it down to 7 outta 10. If you liked the first Inca game your saliva glands will be working overtime if you buy Inca II Wiracocha.

SCARY for POEMS rotten kids

This disc comes with good setup, but it is not over informative if try to run from DOS with low memory. It simply says it won't work.

More complex than the Broderbund titles, it has less cartoon-like graphics but more to do interactively. There are various menu levels which would help kids learn GUI interfaces and basic

In comparison with the others, this "book" is very unimpressive. It claims to give age-old classics the modern approach and allow children access to quality literature.

That may be so, but it also bungs lots of stuff into Windows to make it happen, and even modifies your autoexec.bat in the process. Grimms hardback was never that intrusive.

The program runs using

Beauty & the Beast

Windows multimedia Viewer, complete with the standard Windows menu bar and buttons. Add to that a screen composed mainly of straight text with perhaps on simple two colour drawing plus a full page image every few pages and Beauty and the Beast is about as exciting as sitting in a puddle.

The narrative style is much less interactive than many others with only "Help" style explanation boxes resulting from clicking highlighted words. One plus point is the good menu and keyboard usage. The book features some fairly harsh US accents and not too impressive sound quality, but makes up for that with excellent graphics illustrations.

The poems themselves are horrid, both creepy and gory, but then that's what kids like, isn't it? The disc also contains preview adverts for Peter Rabbit and Aesops fables disc books which is a bit of cheek considering you have paid for the privilege.

In use, it is more like conventional story book with a pic on one side and text on the other. The text is very clear and legible, and lights up when narrated. You can request a word, sentence, or whole poem to be read.

You can also manipulate phrases or words, store them for later use and repeat, learn or analyse them quite

It does have over 50 pages though and a good search facility so you can find your previous place. Nonetheless it is a very flat offering compared to the others we looked at. Save you money and buy the book then read it to the kids yourself.

Protect yourself against costly power surges

The Micro Mains Filter can give you peace of mind . . .

This ingeniously designed new Micro Mains Filter simply plugs into your normal power socket like any other 3 pin plug.

Then if any harmful power surges in excess of 275 volts come through the line, the filter automatically reduces it to a safe constant 240 volts R.M.S.

The Micro Filter will not halt the power supply like many similar regulators, thus protecting valuable memory whilst programming.

Reacting in an astonishing one to two nano seconds (1/1000,000,000 of a second) in response to a power surge, the Micro Mains Filter supplies constant filtered power to your computer without interference and then returns automatically to the surveillance mode after the power surge.

This affordable filter is essential to safeguard your valuable hardware from damage caused by a power surge.

Easy to use, just plug the MMF into the wall socket and plug in your valuable equipment.

The Micro Mains Filter is a must for your:

- a. Computer Hardware
- b. Peripherals
- c. TV/Video/HiFi
- d. Photographic Equipment

DATA/FAX MODEMS

* Austel Approved (A92/25F/0450). Australian designed and manufactured using the Rockwell modem chip.

* Modems are supplied with all necessary cables including plugpack, DB25 and DB9 serial connections as well as Software for DOS fax and communications. Add $35 for fax software operating under Microsoft Windows 3.1.

* External DOS version and internal DOS card units available as well as an external version for Apple Macintosh computers (illustrated) and an internal unit for the Macintosh Powerbook.

* Miniature size - 25% longer than a credit card and 2.2cm thick - ideal for notebooks.

* Computer generated faxes are received with much greater clarity than scanned images from normal fax machines. Faxes can be sent and received in the background while the computer runs other applications. They can be viewed, flipped, scaled, manipulated or printed to plain paper using the normal printer.

* A keystroke allows simple sending of small faxnotes without quitting the current application. A dialling directory function allows automatic sending of 'junk faxes' which can be scheduled at any time, day or night.

Bankcard, Mastercard, Visa or cheques welcome. 5 year warranty.

The IBM 486SLC2 is a high performance, low power, single chip 32-bit microprocessor which features 16 kilobytes of on-chip cache and a two to one internal clocking option that permits the processor to function at twice the bus frequency. Developed by combining the best features of the Intel SX microprocessor family with IBM defined and patented technologies, the SLC boasts an enhanced CISC pipeline architecture that results in significant cost/performance advantages over available technologies. The SLC2 logic design was optimised to improved the processor performance on frequently used instructions and markedly enhances the overall performance on spreadsheets, graphics, word processors and operating systems. Further the 486SLC2 is 100% upward compatible with the Intel 286, 386 & 486 microprocessor series and the IBM 80386 microprocessor family. In featuring the integrated power management system, the IBM 486SLC2 offers the most cost effective, fully supported microprocessor solution in the Desktop, Laptop and Notebook markets today.

World Circuit $85
Experience the thrill of formula one racing via your CDROM drive and sound card. This driving simulation would have to be the ultimate. It's almost as good as the real thing.

Myst $95
This game could be the hottest release for 1994. Available for the Macintosh for sometime, the IBM compatible version has just been released. If you enjoyed Seventh Guest and Dracula Unleashed, then this game will be for you. Unbelievable graphics, full sound track. You will wonder how they manage to cram so much into a game. You can hear the wind whistling through the treetops and the waves lapping on the shore. You can almost feel the sun beating down on your head, while caressing the cool, cut granite with your hand. Everything around you looks incredibly real, down to the textures of brick and marble, grass and tree bark. Wherever you turn, there is a new avenue to explore, a new puzzle to confront as you try to solve the mystery of this world's creation and the fate of it's makers. For this immense, surreal universe is empty of human life.

Hard drives, cartridges and floppies have a nasty habit of dying unexpectedly. Unless an adequate, safe and reliable back-up has been made, the result could be disastrous. A CD-ROM back-up of your valuable data and programs provides security against the unexpected.

Archive your fonts, documents, graphics, audio files and programs to a CD-ROM and free up your valuable hard disk, or magneto-optical cartridges. Data storage on CD-ROM is the safest, most reliable and economical storage solution available today.

Each CD-ROM disk can store up to 640mb and with the advent of 'multisession' CD-ROM players, data can be added to the disk at different times. This means that should you want to only put a small amount of data on the disk now, more can be added when you are ready. An 'on-site' service for the downloading of data is available, (if required). In general, the initial CD-ROM pressing is only $150 and a one day turnaround is available.

CD-ROM Bureau Service

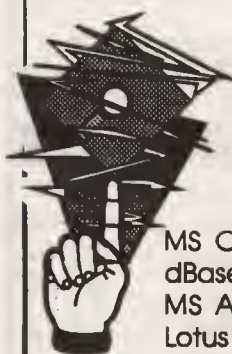

Including: Mass storage/Archiving, Back-ups and Database copying, CD-ROM Mastering and replication for software and multimedia production. In addition, a wide range of CD-ROM titles and hardware are available.

MasterCAD

Quick and powerful, MasterCAD drivers provide speed, bird's eye view, 24 bit rendering and more.

16 MILLION COLOURS

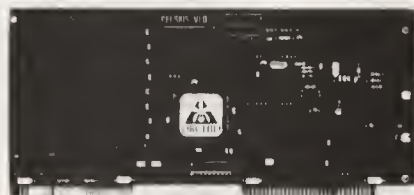

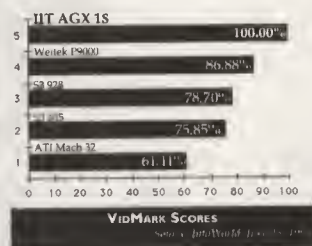

Enjoy the colours and speed of our 24 bit driver. It's so fast and realistic, it looks like a picture.

MULTIMEDIA

With Orchid's bi-directional feature connector, hardware and drivers, the Celsius provides top notch support for multimedia environments.

PERFORMANCE

In a recent VidMark performance test, Celsius' chip, the AGX 15, sped to victory in VidMark's latest comparison. VidMark is a benchmark that uses four real world Windows applications including WordPerfect 5.2, Excel 4.0, CorelDraw 3.0, and Freelance 2.0.

AWARDS

The Fahrenheit Series has been widely acclaimed by major publications for its high quality features and performance.

SPEED

Thanks to Orchid's state-of-the-art Hyper-driver technology and S3 processor, Fahrenheit rates among the fastest available video boards.

VALUE ADDED

Fahrenheit offers users easy installation, a 4 year warranty, Windows Network Support, as well as OS/2 support. And it's made in the USA.

BOARDS

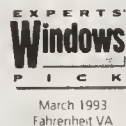

Orchid's Fahrenheit cards lead the industry in providing users advanced features and performance. All Fahrenheit series graphic accelerators are backed by a 4 year warranty and include Multimedia Ready VESA-compliant feature connector. They require a 386/486 ISA or VL-Bus System.

Kelvin 64

64-BIT WINDOWS GRAPHICS ACCELERATOR

Orchid's powerful 64 bit graphics accelerator, the Kelvin 64, provides high speed horizontal and vertical acceleration in all graphic modes. It uses a full 64 bit non-interleaved DRAM interface which is twice the throughput of 32 bit controllers. The result is top graphic responsiveness. Unlike most 32 bit accelerators, Kelvin 64 does not require expensive memory interleaving to achieve faster processing times.

64-BIT vs. 32-BIT GRAPHIC ACCELERATORS

Some 32-bit graphic accelerators only accelerate certain resolutions and colour modes, but Kelvin 64's powerful 64-bit architecture accelerates all your modes. In fact, our standard 256 colour mode performs faster than most VRAM accelerators! Most 32-bit graphic accelerators must interleave with expensive memory to get the necessary speed to run Windows. Orchid's Kelvin 64 uses inexpensive DRAM with a full 64 bit non-interleaved DRAM interface which provides the highest throughput possible.

KITS KITS KITS

FMTX1 TRANSMITTER KIT $49 (BT $69)

This kit uses a single transistor to provide up to 2.5 watts into a 50ohm load. It can be set on the FM band from 88-108mhz. The transmitter uses high level inputs (around 500mv RMS) for example a CD player or cassette deck. Distances of up to 100 miles are obtainable over line of sight. The kit is easy to build and use.

FMTX2A Digital Stereo Coder KIT $49 (BT $99)

This stereo generator or coder uses all digital techniques to produce a multiplexed output to drive a mono transmitter. It is superior in design to the simple BA1404 designs and surpasses many commercial exciter in performance. Australian pre-emphasis is on board and presets allow it to be used with all of our transmitter designs.

FMTX2B TRANSMITTER KIT $49 (BT $99)

This is out top of the line transmitter design to be used as a broadcast exciter with up to 30m watts out. The design is XTAL locked for frequency stability, and features a 3 stage transmitter design. While the kit can be used and built easily it helps if you have some test equipment and experience to align it. If you don't then alternative alignment details are given. The transmitter can be used as a stand alone design or be used to drive a larger linear amplifier.

FMTX5 Stereo Transmitter KIT $98 (BT $199)

This incorporates both the FMTX2A and FMTX2B on one PCB for a complete stereo exciter. This is the highest quality transmitter kit in Australia. It uses a XTAL locked transmitter to give a clean signal on 100mhz. Unlike tunable transmitters which are unstable this one is rock steady. The digital stereo coder exceeds the performance of many commercial units costing up to $2000.

You can use multiple transmitters to cover greater distances and still comply with the DOTC regulations of having a radiated signal of less than 76db at 3metres, to comply with the new no licence part 3 Regulations. Our FMTX-1 has also been tested into 2km of coax terminated in a 150 ohm pot (called a leaky coax antenna) and the results were great. Always check with the DOTC for compliance with the latest regulations before use.

FMTX3A $4 FMTX3B $8 transmitter kits only

This is a simple low cost design about the size of a small postage stamp. Two versions are available one with the other without a mic preamp. This project is suitable for beginners.

FMTX4 TRANSMITTER KIT $20 (BT $39)

Many customers have purchased our FMTX1 kit but find it too expensive and do not need 2.5 watts output. The FMTX4 was the answer it uses low cost transistors (2 off) in push pull to give about 1/2 watt output on the FM band. The design is small in size (about 20mm x 10mm) and easy enough for beginners to build as well as experienced users.

DIGI 125 AUDIO POWER AMP KIT

Digi 125 power amp module small in size easy to build with no alignment procedure 50 watt $15, 125 watt $19, 200 watt $29, a double PCB for stereo or bridge use only $9. Over 19,000 sold since 1987.

AEM 35 watt single chip amp $15.

Easy to build and only 10mm x 15mm this is a great project for advanced and beginners alike. Two modules can be bridged for higher output power.

MAX I/O kit $169.
For computers with 7 relays, ADC, DAC, 8 TTL inputs, stepper driver, includes sample software, uses the parallel printer port. Works with most PC's

I/O bits Windows software. $299

This is a windows based control and development package to let you make quick easy to program replacements for PLC's and industrial controllers using a GUI based programming system that requires NO CODE. The I/O bits software alone is available, to talk to any printer port, or purchase the bundle of software and max kit for only $369.

NEW Relay 16 board $239

This kit has an intelligent port expander chip and is addressable so that up to 256 boards can be used from 1 printer port. Each of the 16 lines on the board can be wired to drive a relay a led or be used as an input. On board jumpers set the board address. An IDC adapter PCB is available for $5 to make cable assembly a snap. The blank PCB is also available for $39 for those who wish to source their own parts.

ETI-1623 24 line I/O card $69

for PC's uses only 3 chips easy to build uses an industry standard 8255 to provide 24 programmable input/output lines. PCB only $39

NEW Radio & TV Studio Kits

Digital Reverb unit KIT $88 (BT $129)

This is a self contained PCB with a Delta modulation A-D and D-A converter, on board counters and DRAM controller MUX and DRAM. Variable delays and effects available, does not use cheap bucket brigade delay lines. This kit makes an ideal project for those wishing to learn more about digital audio techniques first hand. Uses 11 easy to obtain IC's and a double sided PCB. Unbalanced in & out at 1/2v P-P.

7 second delay KIT $785 (BT $999)

This unit is a full stereo digital delay for radio station use for phone ins, and interviews. Provides an adjustable 7 second delay with 4.5khz audio bandwidth balanced line +8dbm input and output. Only 1 front panel control (Delay).

LOW DISTORTION BALANCED OSCILLATOR KIT $69 (BT $99)

This oscillator was designed to be used in studios as a source of 400hz or 1khz (or any other frequency you wish to use) with an adjustable output of up to +21dbm. At +8dbm output a simple resistor splitting network gives up to 17 output splits from the one module.

MONO Audio DA (distribution Amplifier) KIT $69 (BT $99)

This PCB has balanced or unbalanced input and either 17 x balanced or 34 x unbalanced outputs, each at +8dbm. Up to 20db of adjustable gain is available in an easy to build layout. Use two for stereo.

STEREO Universal Balanced line converter KIT $69 (BT $99)

This one PCB has up to 60db gain (Adjustable) and can be used for balanced or unbalanced input to balanced or unbalanced output. It is ideal for converting domestic audio gear to balanced line operation for broadcast use. Because of the large gain available it can also be used as a balanced mic preamp (albeit with not as good specs.) The same module can be used as the basis of a custom built audio desk.

12 Channel Broadcast mixing desk KIT $99 (BTS 129)

This PCB contains 2 sets of stereo gain blocks, a stereo 3 watt speaker /headphone monitor amp, and a single mic amp. When assembled with pots switches etc it makes up a complete broadcast spec mixing desk. For balanced inputs and outputs use as many of our Stereo balanced line converter kits as required. With many community broadcasters using domestic CD and cassette decks etc. use this as an unbalanced mixer and where required add the balanced converters. Suggested hookup diagrams supplied, can be extended to a maximum of 32 channels.

Universal PSU (PCB and PLANS) $10

With all of these terrific modules we needed a simple to build regulated power supply board. This board has 3 separate power supplies on 1 PCB. A single +ve supply (use any 3 terminal regulator) and a split +/- supply (use any + or - 3 terminal regulator). All diodes and filter capacitors are on the one PCB.

All in one 386SX/486SLC CPU board (386SX-40 BT $599 486SLC-50 $999)

This is an ideal CPU for industrial or imbedded projects. The whole processor fits on a half length card (172mm x 122mm) with a standard AT 16 bit connector which plugs into a passive backplane (if required). Includes 2s/p/games, IDE Hard disk and floppy disk, AMI bios up to 16mb ram, keyboard port, watch dog timer, on board speaker, +5v at 1 amp, +/- 12v at 20ma. Industrial 60 deg c. temperature spec. 4 Slot backplane $59 8 slot backplane $99 20 slot backplane $399 Micro tower case (8.4cm x 17cm x 25cm) and power supply to suit with 3 slot backplane and 2" hard disk adapter $179.
